A mother sat by her little child. She was very sad for she feared it would die. It was quite pale and its little eyes were closed and sometimes it drew a very deep breath, almost like a sigh : and then the mother gazed more sadly than ever at the poor little creature. Someone knocked at the door, and a poor old man walked in. He was wrapped in something that looked like a great coarse cloth and he required it truly to keep him warm, for it was cold winter the country everywhere lay covered with snow and ice, and the wind blew so sharply that it cut ones face. The little child had dozed off to sleep for a moment and the mother, seeing that the old man shivered with the cold, rose and placed a small mug of tea on the stove to warm for him. The old man sat and rocked the cradle; and the mother seated her self on a chair near him and looked at her sick child who still breathed hearty, and took hold of its little hand.
